HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF JANUARY 1925

NOW whirled down through the trees to drift into the various hollows and crevices while the wind whistled between the branches of the pines which were to be seen everywhere. There came the sound of murmuring voices which at times could be heard distinctly and again were obscured by the many sounds of the forest. Upon tracing the voices to their source one would find that they issued from the mouth of a large cave which was set far back in the side of a hill that was covered with rocks and underbrush. Just within the cave a small group of Indians could be seen squatting around a fire. Tall and erect in their midst stood one who appeared to be the chieftain of his tribe. Grouped about him were a few old warriors, but for the most part they were young braves who had not yet been tried in battle. All were apparently interested in the story that he was unfolding - the legend of the January 1925 tribe of North Central Indians. If one could have understood the language of the Chieftain he would have heard a narrative something like this.

Four short years ago two hundred and sixty papooses began the initiatory step in preparing themselves for the great battles that they must fight in the future. That they might become an honor and a credit to their race the poor little freshmen, for that is what they were called, faced obstacles which seemed almost impossible to overcome. At first they were greatly bewildered and could not remember "where to go when" nor were the older members of the tribe of much assistance for they often preferred to send the young redskins on fruitless hunting expeditions. Finally the papooses arrived at their destination only to live in fear and trembling lest the all knowing ones who were called teachers should scalp them. After the dread of the teachers had been overcome, such evils as algebra and English haunted the poor little Indians. Nothing daunted them, they armed themselves with study, perseverance, and will and sallied forth to meet the hard flint axes of Latin and Science.

Time passed. When the bright warm day of summer came the chiefs deemed it necessary to grant the young Indians a respite after having fought so bravely with their enemies for six long moons.

Two more moons waxed and waned and again the tribe of 1925 came together to continue their fight. With experience as their guiding hand they fared forth to complete their first great step in the Land of Knowledge. Some of the band were not strong enough, and were left behind to increase the numbers of the June '25 tribe.

At the beginning of the next year the Indians were christened the Sophomores. Proud and haughty they were, for now their time had come to torture the freshmen. However, they were still pursued by enemies larger, stronger, and mightier than before. Newer and stronger evils confronted them in the form of Geometry, Botany, Zoology. In spite of the many obstacles which beset the way a few of the band managed to enter the various activities. Some of those who entered into football have since brought great honor to their tribe. All went well with the noble young redskins until the summer moons again made their appearance. Then great terror seized the band for they had to again pass through the torture of a series of tests before they might join the coveted ranks of upper classmen.

As Juniors they entered the activities with even greater zeal than before. Some of the members journeyed with the basketball team to Chicago. When they returned they brought many trophies to present to the tribe. Realizing that concentration of efforts would be necessary if they wished to attain the goal of gradu-
THE CLASS WILL

WEN THE class of January 1925, leave our arguments in class meetings, our peculiar ways and our virtues, to the members of North Central, with the hope that they will accept our gifts graciously and benefit by them.

Harold Wall leaves his “girl,” Avon Couts, to the junior set with the injunction to care for her during school hours.

Joe Greenough leaves his executive ability to Don Axtell in order that he may secure any position in school that he desires.

Tessie Burke leaves her temper to “sheik” Jack Graham for fear his may give out from over use.

Mary Allison leaves her freckles to Kelly Ward.

Ted Rohwer leaves his red hair and his partnership in the Haynes-Rohwer Correspondence School to Everett Heming.

Genevieve Green leaves her superfluous dates and phone calls to Jerrie Bernard.

Lillian Epley leaves her “Bobs” to his feminine admirers, but if you value your life—hands off!

Bob Fritchard leaves his success in school and his large wardrobe to his brother.

Leila Lundy leaves her clever public speaking speeches as pleasant memories to Miss Elliott.

Cynthia Cadwell leaves her naturally curly hair to Melba Welton—We’ve heard Mell likes it better that way.

Charles Kronenberg leaves his Reo sedan to Norval Rader so that he won’t have to walk home from Summit Boulevard when he misses the owl car.

Helen Fowler leaves her place on the scholastic honor roll to Madelyn Devereaux.

Marjorie Petersen would leave her lovely voice, but she wants to use it to help make her career successful.

Hawley Cole leaves the kiss that he gave Mildred Louise when he crowned her queen of the Pep Carnival, to her admirers. Please don’t fight over it.

Babe Bush leaves her height to Edgie Hogle.

Hugh Cheesman leaves his ability to handle the football money to Francis Blod.

Don Disotell leaves his good looks and keen appearance to Manley Douglas. (We really don’t think that he needs them.)

Claire Donovan leaves her fantastic toes and rope spinning ability to Lola Standard.

Eric Fletcher and Henrietta Flynn leave their artistic talents to Myrtle Richardson.

Matthew Stevens leaves his successful career as quarterback on the football team to Roy Fait with the hopes that he will make the first lineup next fall.

Elinor Jackson leaves her U. of W. Kappa Sig” to Una Mae Decker.

Frenchie Hughes leaves her sweet mannerisms and lovely voice to Doris Daniels.

Wayne Fitzgerald leaves his extra aver-dupois to George A. Anderson.

THE CLASS PROPHECY

At the time our committee was selected
It all came rather unexpected
But just as far as we can see
The members of our class will be:

To Tessie Burke we point with pride
The Prince of Wales will make her his bride.

Leila Lundy will win success
For she will run the Spokane Press.
Bill Becker's life will be quite sunny
His wives will die and leave him money.
Matthew Stevens of football fame,
Will be the coach at Notre Dame.
Willard MacDonald, a loving swain
In a despondent mood will shoot out his brains.

"Love in a Bungalow, Built for You"
A famous song, by the famous two—
Pritchard and Petersen.
Hugh Cheesman will be the chief gazink
Of a high class club called "Rinky-dinks."
As an artist, Babe Bush will meet with illusions,
All she can draw will be poor conclusions.
Four times wed, and four times parted
Poor Paul Kitto will be broken hearted.
Joe Greenough will lead a terrible life
He will marry a domineering wife.
As for the future of Genevieve Green
It's far too uncertain to be foreseen.
Margy Elliot is now sweet and shy
But in her old age she'll be terribly spry.
In regard to our humorous Harold Wall
Why, he just ain't got no future at all.
You wouldn't think it but do you know?
Ed Lowery will tell stories by radio.

Bill Elmslie will keep his art for acting
Both good and bad, to be exacting.
It's all settled, cause we can see
Ella Mae married to her S. A. E.
We sympathize with Marjorie Bloom
For a hairdressers life will be her doom.
Of course Helen Fowler will be a teacher
And Jimmy Martz a Methodist preacher.
An opera career for Beulah Blair
She'll make her debut with "A Maiden's Prayer."
And Charles Kronenberg can be nothing more
Than a floor walker in a department store.
And did you know that Margaret Ennis
Will only prove a public menace.
The stars predict for our president, Rohwer
He'll have food and shelter but nothing more.
We sure feel sorry for Hawley Cole
He won't find work to save his soul.
If Wayne Fitzgerald gets bigger daily
He'll soon be signed with Barnum and Bailey.

For those matrimonially inclined
We have great faith in the undersigned.
Allison-Graham happily mated
Disotel-Dewey—separated.
Milly and Tom—happy of course
But Cadwell and Irwin—divorce.
As for the rest of our dear classmates
Judging from the past, if one related
What each will be in his future life
One might as well start a civil strife.

Editorial and Literary....
HAPPINESS

Robert Louis Stevenson once said "To be truly happy is a question of how to begin and not how to end; of what we want and not what we have." It has also been said that happiness lies not in doing what one likes but liking what one does.

Doubtless everyone, on leaving high school is filled with numerous ideals and plans for the future; of great accomplishments and success. In the mad rush for wealth and fame all too many miss the fundamental element in life; happiness. Too often our eyes are kept glued on our goal "Business Success" and then when we have finally achieved that which we set out to achieve we find, much to our distress, that we are not a success after all, but a failure because we have not found happiness.

Students leaving high school; don't be so busy seeking success that you miss it. Like Stevenson says, let us learn how to begin things and not how to end them. Let us enter into everything with a willing spirit and not be afraid to work. We must do our best always because if a thing is worth doing at all it is worth doing well. We must remember that we will get out of this old world just what we put in it. The real secret of success lies in making others happy. Aim to be a friend and you will always have friends.

Those who sit and wait for happiness never get it. Those who are always looking for happiness never find it. Those who give it, receive it. Those who deserve it, get it.

Happiness must go hand in hand with success or there is no success at all. So when you are striving toward success give a little thought to your happiness and remember the secret. And let us always remember those words of Pope:

Fixed to no spot is happiness, sincere:
"Tis nowhere to be found, on everywhere;
"Tis never to be bought, but always free.

THE CLASS OF JANUARY '25

Four years ago the class of January '25 entered North Central as freshman. During this time they have worked to attain standings and distinction for themselves that they may have something by which to be remembered.

Although regarded by many as more or less a matter of course that another class should be graduating from North Central it is not with this feeling that those of the senior class are leaving this institution which they have regarded as more or less a home during the time spent here. Though they be scattered to the far ends of the earth there will always be that feeling in the hearts of each and every one of the members of the graduating class of January 25 of utmost respect for that school from which they received their diplomas. There will be that longing to be back in the halls of old North Central, to mingle with the crowd and to take part in the many activities for which the institution is famous.

We are living in a great period of advancement and we expect that those who follow in our footsteps will attain far greater marks than those which we have attempted to gain. With this in mind we wish those who follow the very best of success and opportunities and only hope that our records may be worthy of association with them.

DO YOUR PART

One in looking back on past experiences can see many things which might have been done differently. He can see where he might have helped someone else out of a hole or how he might have taken part in many things which would have benefited him. This is the position of many students on reaching the senior class. They find that they have accomplished nothing outside of their regular routine school work; that they have nothing creditable by which to remember their high school years.

In North Central there are so many activities that there is a place for everyone of the students to take part. The school is controlled so largely by students that it is the duty of and to the best interest of each pupil to take part in its control. Besides the actual benefit derived while in school there is the result of this training in after life. It fits one better to take up the duties of citizenship and to take part in the political and social activities of everyday life.

But perhaps more closely related is the benefit derived by the school as a whole from such cooperation. In the first place this works for a much more efficient system in which everyone takes his fair share of responsibility. In the second place it brings about a better relationship between the students and the teachers and last but not least it does away with a great deal of the jealousy among the students.

Some of the upperclassmen may think this is meant for the lowerclassmen only that it is too late for them to do anything along these lines but as the old saying goes it is never too late to change. Of course they may not be able to accomplish as much as some others but they can do a great deal toward helping the rest. Therefore let's get together and have each and every student in North Central taking part in some activity.

WHAT LARAMIE LEARNED

LARAMIE Fielding after accepting the position as a substitute teacher at Unalaska, didn't dream of staying any longer than three weeks. Unalaska—of all places! One of Alaska's loneliest and most unbearably small towns, so Laramie thought.

The district's one school was established, taught and operated by a Miss Myra Sawyer. When Miss Sawyer fell ill, the white residents of the town sent to Seattle a teacher's agency for a willing, capable, teacher. As the willing capable teacher Miss Laramie Fielding was sent.

The trip from Seattle had been hard. The boat—and oh! Such a boat—was slow, uncomfortable, and inconvenient. Then there had been no one to meet Laramie, as had been planned; no one to direct her to her new home.

"I can't stay here all night," she said as she stood on the dock waiting for Mr. MacDonald, her new landlord. "I'll stay at the hotel."

Unalaska's one hotel was not unlike other small town affairs, wooden, rickety and small. This Laramie went through in none too good a mood. It was very much beneath her dignity to be forced to pass a night in a fishing cove's hotel.

The clerk was a half-breed Indian girl whose name, Laramie learned, was Nituna. The Indian girl was fat and greasy and wore a perpetual smile. If there was anything Miss Fielding detested it was a perpetual smile.

Anxious to please, the girl offered Laramie the best room the house afforded.

"Eet small," she explained in her broken mixture of French and Indian. "But eet clean—veery," she added.

"Yes, yes, of course," answered the other impatiently. "Cleanliness is to be expected when one pays two dollars for such a room as this." Her critical eye surveyed her surroundings. The room contained only a bed, a washstand and a small chair.

"It will do," she said as she dismissed Nituna. But the girl was loathe to go. Instead she came bashfully up to Laramie and gazed at the other's personal effects.

"Pretty beads—veery," she remarked wistfully. "Me—I have no beads."

"I'm very sorry," Laramie said haughtily. "Perhaps you could earn some if you did not stand around, but go to work."

No dismissal could be any plainer, so Nituna left the room. Needless to say, Laramie was glad to be alone, for she was tired of the sort of people one found in an Alaskan town. She went to the window and peered out. First her unaccustomed eyes saw a soft grey darkness, then she was able to distinguish buildings and observe that it was snowing. Laramie dimly wondered how she was to walk the two miles to MacDonald's through this snow. Tomorrow—perhaps tomorrow Mr. MacDonald would come for her. What had delayed him, she wondered? Oh, well—she began to prepare for bed and was just brushing her long, black hair, when she heard a knock on the door.

"Oh, fiddlessticks. I suppose it is that Indian." She opened the door and faced Nituna bearing a pitcher of water on one hand and a bowl of steaming broth in the other.

"Eet for you. Drink soup. Here water for wash." Nituna seemed anxious to please.

"Thank you. I didn't need the soup," Laramie said curtly as she took the proffered articles and shut the door. As little as Laramie liked Nituna, she had to appreciate the broth.

The next morning, Laramie donned some more substantial clothing and proceeded to a good hot breakfast. Again she was greeted by the Indian girl's winning and cheerful smile.

"Have you seen Mr. MacDonald?" she asked the girl.

"He send message you come. Hees wife seeek. I show way."

"I'll have some breakfast first," Miss Fielding said. "I'll let you know when I'm ready, girl."

"Yes," Nituna did not like the way this white girl treated her. The Indian girl wanted and needed a good, kind friend. In Laramie, the girl saw dim possibilities of
one. But she was merely called "girl" by the other, and it hurt poor Nituna.

Half an hour later, Laramie announced her readiness to start. Her baggage was to be left at the hotel for Mr. MacDonald to call for the following day. Nituna said she would go halfway with Laramie. They had gone nearly a mile without speaking when Laramie noticed that snow was beginning to fall again. Each crystal flake seemed to grow larger and more beautiful. With the advent of the wind, the danger of becoming lost was evident. The white girl did not know a single inch of the trail which Nituna had traversed hundreds of times. Furthermore, that trail was fast losing its resemblance as a path. Each flurry of snow, each gust of wind made the predicament of the girls more precarious. Laramie opened her mouth and was about to speak, but upon a second thought, snapped it shut. The silence was becoming unbearable. Away in the distance was heard the plaintive wail of a coyote. And closer yet was heard the dismal howls and yip yips of wolves.

Nituna was silent also. If the white girl would not—Oh, but she would. She was talking. "Nituna," she said, "I've been a miserable little wretch. I'm just as sorry as I can be. Will you forgive me?"

"I weel, Nituna—she hold no grudge."

"Good, and now, I have a favor to ask of you, rather I almost demand it. Won't you walk the rest of the way with me, Nituna? Please. You see I'm not familiar with this country—and if I should get lost here—why—Nituna, please.

Her eagerness, her pleading and utter desolation won the Indian girl.

"Yes, I weel."

And three hours later, after braving the storm like veterans, the girls reached MacDonald's, it was a different Laramie from the one of the preceding night.

"Nituna," she said hugging the other, "we're going to be friends. I owe you a lot for what you've done. See if we aren't good friends, and Mr. MacDonald tells me I'll have to stay two months or more."

"Good. We be friends—yes," said the happy Nituna.

And she felt as if they would be.

YOUR NAME AND MINE

M OST people like 'bout everything they got and think what they got is better'n what everybody else's got. But there is one thing what nobody likes his own of—that ain't very good wordin' but it expresses my meaning. Names, given names,—did you ever hear of a guy what liked his own name? They are very scarce (those kind of fellows, I mean, not the given names) and if you know one he'd be too vain and self-concerned for you to be willing to confess you knew him. Anyways the point is that people don't like their names.

I want to be a champeen on the side of us poor creatures who have to go through all of our natural lives hooked up with either a great-great uncle's name or a name "so distinguished and nice sounding" as the doners sometimes say. In the first place I want to speak about the kids what was donated their, ancestors names. I profoundly (somebody said that meant swearing but it don't) pity them. Names like Archilaid, Virgil, Cyrus, Silas, Phoeche, Maggie, Matilda and Agetha are typical examples. People feel that when there is such a beautiful, appealing name in the family tree they have to pass it along to all the little saps. I've heard it's awful hard to be modern with a name like one of them followin' you all the time. But seems to me it's the kids with the angel-soundin' names what's the devilishest. For example take that there Daniel Pry (ain't Daniel a angellyfied name) look how he run away and married a actress and went plumb to the dogs.

Lots a times parents say that a certain ancestral name is so becoming and so they smother their poor kids with it and all the time the main idea was the gettin' of the nice check they knew the relative with the kidnapped name would send. You got to be good to live up to a fairly good name but you got to be a durn sight better to outlive one of those kind of hitherto-forementioned relics.

The other kind of given names is those kind what are supposed to sound good, some sort of a creation out of the deep-grooved mind of one of those good-meaning parents what wants their kid to have an "odd" cognomen. I may as well confess that my name, being Bernadine, comes under this here heading. Others like Beverly, Corinne, Eulalie, Laurice, Hubert, Wendell, Rollo, Martin and Clifford are almost as bad. Some of them sound rather romantic, don't you know,—like they just jumped out of a fiction book. It seems to me that there ain't much to be said about such names. They ain't worth much. The only thing,—it must have took a awful lot of courage on the part of the parents to rope a kid with such a name.

In the long run, it's the mothers to who the blame should be given for the suffering of us poor benited generation. Why couldn't they have called us "Pete" or "Sonnie" or "Honey" until we were old enough to choose a name for ourselves, one that was worth wearing? Guess they didn't think of it. Anyway, it wasn't fair cuz all we could do when they hitched us up to sech a name was to lay and squall and squall like sixty which didn't do no good 'cause they only thought we had the stomic ache or wanted to be turned over or something. I bet if we had a chance we coulda seed to it that we got a real short, non-ancestral, non-pretty-sounding, meaningless name like Lea, Jane, Don, Max, Fred, or Glen. But the only way we can get revenge, since it's too late to help our own case, is to give worse names to the future generation. But then we'd be less considerate than our parents and our children would write and say a whole lot worser things than this here about their cognomens and us.

Sometimes nicknames are a durn good thing 'cause they hide your real name. For example Jerry is a cute nickname and it keeps everybody from knowing that your real name is Jeremiah. However, if your name happens to be Lionel and the kids call you Li or Nell, nicknames are forever condemned by Your Grace.

To make a long story longer, I say: Down with ancestral names! Down with "pretty sounding" names! Bring on the short, easy, meaningless names now and forevermore! May our parents be forgiven for our names and may we treat the coming generation better than our folks treated us!

LETTERS FROM A NEWSHOUND

Dere friend,—This here aren't to be a rele letter cause I'm so blasted busy gettin' junk in for this here Tamarack thing. Did I tell yu that I was give the most high and elavatin' position of Literary editor of the annual Well I were and I am constantly in trouble with my teachers for not gettin' my lessons but I reckon that I'll have a heap sight moar trouble when the durn thing's printed and distributed. Maybe I won't come to school then, I dun no yet.

I keep askin' Harld Wall how to spell some of these long words I'm tryin' to use but he don't no much more about it than I do so I plum give it up. My English teachers says as how I was improovin' in spellin' and general grammar so I'm gettin' awful proud. But someone ask me the other day how I ever got owt a grade school so that took me down sum.

We'll soon be graduatin'. I thot I better tell yu that a little in advance so yu'd have time to think it over. Someone just swiped my pencil. I bet if I had a eversharp they wouldn't dare to cop it. I kinda wish I did have one, come to thing of it.

I guess I've accomplished my task so I'll kwit. I feal terrible, have a hed ache and the grip.

Hoping you are the same.
A true pal,

JOHN WAKES UP

JOHN McMasters was a goof. A goof of the worst sort. Always in the way so the fellows said and never doing much of anything. Why he was a goof was hard to explain some might say that he just hadn't woke up to the fact that he was an actor in this great world not just a spectator.

Yet there was sort of a heroic stoicism that calls my admiration for he also was aware of the fact that there was something; a something vague and indefinite between the social and mental status of himself and the rest of the children he consorted with.

On the playground John held back not because he didn't want to play but a sort of bashfulness kept him from rushing in and playing with the rest of the fellows. And so John held back almost all through his grade school days a fellow that was just a sort of piece of furniture. Getting his lessons with a boresome regularity that left no reason for complaint and mediocre standard which removed him from commendation. One day he changed.

It was in the winter time and the school class of which he was a member was holding a sleighride party. Jane Greene the leading feminine attraction in the 8B class took charge of the affair.

Jane said to the rest of the congregation that usually swarmed around in the entrance of the school house just before the quarter to nine bell rang, "I've gotta big surprise for you kids, when the sleighride comes."

"Oh, what is it Janie?" asked Marion, her best pal.

"Well I'm going to let John take me!" with a air of comedy.

"Awww," replied her companion in wide-mouth wonder, he ain't nobody."

But the real reason wasn't out of compassion for John. Jane had an argument with Harry, who usually took her on parties and picnics and she knew if she went with some "eligible" boy that Harry would desert her forever. Therefore she thought she would use John as sort of a mask to win Harry from any girl he took.

When John heard that Jane was ex-so-called sleighride was to be. The sky was overcast with grey threatening clouds, the snow was nearly a foot and a half deep and the road was perfect for a sleigh. John nervously watched the clock till it read quarter to seven then he braced himself mentally and prepared to go fourth in the contest of hearts. Jane lived about three blocks from his residence and it only took a few minutes to reach there. John happily started down the last block to Jane’s. Across the street he heard the merry voices of some girls ringing clear through the soft stillness of the early darkness.

"O, she is just kidding him along to make Harry jealous."

"That’s what I thought. For John is too dead for words!"

The voices trailed off in the distance as they went farther away but John gathered enough of the conversation to realize that he was just a goat. He was half tempted to turn around and go home. But he didn’t. Instead he went and got Jane and took her up to school where they were to congregate.

"So they think I’m dead," thought John, "Well, I’ll show them."

Into the sled piled one hilarious shouting mass of children.

"What are we going to do after the ride?" asked John.

"Oh, I dunno—probably go home!"

"Home, garsh, I’ll be so hungry that I can’t stand up. Say, let’s go out to my grandmaw’s to eat. We can get some chili and crackers and take it out there."

A collection was taken and they bought a dozen cans of chili and a couple of boxes of crackers at the little store across the road. Then the sleigh pulled away from the school with a merry jingle of the bells, snort of the horses and the voices of the happy children faded away into the distance.

On the sleigh the conversation didn’t lag a bit as far as John was concerned. In sheer desperation he talked and talked and the rest of the crowd sat back and enjoyed such an extraordinary sight as John McMaster being the shining light of the crowd. Harry, in one corner of the sled, wasn’t enjoying himself very much. For he was the school sheik and bitterly he resented the inroads John made up on his popularity.

Too soon the sleigh pulled up in front of Mrs. Andrews, John’s grandmother. She a small vivacious white haired woman, welcomed them into her large comfortable living room. A bright fire burned in the stone fireplace and sent a cheery glow over the faces of the children. It was not long until the visitors made themselves at home and what a time they had! Amid shrieks of joy they played the old time honored games of Spin the Platter, Winkum, Musical Chairs and Post Office.

This was the turning point in John McMaster’s life. He now woke up to the fact that all he needed to be popular was to become sociable and always have something to do. All through the party John was the center of attraction and after the affair was over he felt like he had a new lease on life.

And like most women, Jane failed to do the expected thing and become enamored with John she went back to her old flame Harry, and left John in the lurch. And like most men do, he resolved never, never to look at another woman. He didn’t—for about one day and then he fell victim to a clever little girl who was all sympathy for his hurt feelings. So his feelings quickly recovered and he was again foremost in the social world of the school.

And they call them the weaker sex!

FORENSICS

At the beginning of this semester when the call was issued for debaters, 60 students turned out. The North Central debate league was organized October 10 and it was decided that the state league question: Resolved, that the United States should grant to the Philippines immediate independence, should be used by the league teams. From the 60 who turned out, 30 students were picked and organized into ten teams with the following personnel:

Weldon Schimke, captain, Helen Pleiss, Lois Beavers; Gilbert Schade, captain, Margaret Kelly, Miriam Johnson; Kenneth Davis, captain, Margaret Coughlin, Leon Beckett; Orville Dunham, captain, Kathryn Stedmon, Richard Foth; Katherine Kiesling, captain, Blythe Pike, Martha Schoening; Clinton McCracken, captain, Frank Brown, Harold Smothermon; Ronald Phares, captain, Sterling Taylor, Willard Bungay; John De Armand, captain, Richard Campbell, Jack Faulds; Martin Burns, captain, Neilda Wilson, Dwyer Hawley; Margaret Still, captain, Paul Crooks, Arkil Israel.

Fifteen debates were held in three weeks. Each team debated three times. Each debater upheld the affirmative side once and the negative side once and then drew straws to determine which side he should take the third time. The team composed of Gilbert Schade, Miriam Johnson and Margaret Kelly went through the season without a defeat.

During the debate series the judges kept an individual rating of each participant and at the end of the debates the eight students having the highest ratings were chosen, six to debate for the Kennedy medals and two to act as alternates. Those taking part in the finals were:

Affirmative: Weldon Schimke, captain, Miriam Johnson, John De Armand.
Negative: Katherine Kiesling, captain, Kenneth Davis, Martin Burns.
Alternates: Blythe Pike and Martin Burns.

This final debate which was on the same league question was most hotly contested.

All the speakers showed good stage presence and their speeches were clear cut and possessed an exceptional quality of finish.

The affirmative was given a two to one decision although the judges had a difficult time in deciding. Those acting as judges were: John Shaw, L. C. Bradford and the Reverend Thomas Jeffries. Each member was presented with a gold medal by Principal Kennedy and these three were considered the best debaters in North Central.

A triangular debate league has been organized in Spokane consisting of Lewis and Clark, Hillyard and North Central. It has been planned that a debate shall be held at each school on the night of February 13. Lewis and Clark will meet North Central in the North Central auditorium. North Central will clash with Hillyard and Lewis and Clark will go up against Hillyard at the Lewis and Clark high school. Those of the North Central squad from whom the triangular league team will be picked are: Margaret Coughlin, Weldon Schimke, Miriam Johnson, John De Armand, Clinton McCracken, Kenneth Davis, Katherine Kiesling, Donald Phares and Martin Burns.

The regular junior and senior Ahlquist debates will be held sometime in the early part of next semester. One hundred dollars in prizes is distributed among the winners of these debates by the Ahlquist brothers of this city. All students are urged to turn out for debate next semester if they are interested in this kind of work.

Lee A. Meyer, debating coach, and his assistant, Miss Nita May, deserve a great deal of credit for their work with the students and for developing a keen interest in this activity among all the students at North Central. All the members of the various teams wish to thank the coaches for their instruction and the patient work they have done. A great portion of the success of the semester is due to the coaches and it has indeed been a successful semester.
THE BAND

ONE OF the busiest and best semesters that the North Central band has ever had is just being completed, with a membership of 71 and a marching band of 54 pieces. The band is under the direction of L. C. Bradford, faculty leader, and Everett Nelson, student leader; Ronald Rice is student manager.

This semester an addition has been made to the band in the form of a drum major to lead the band in public appearance and parades. Two students qualified for the position; William Langford and Lewis Bostwick, they will take turns in directing the band. Part of the drum major's equipment was presented to the school by Tomlinson's, Inc.

During the semester the band has made 14 appearances, playing for four football games including a trip to Walla Walla financed by the band. They appeared in the Hallowe'en and Armistice parades and the serpentine before the Thanksgiving game, and also at six convocations.

Adding greatly to the efficiency of the band is the brass quartet organized this season. The members are Harleigh Lines, Edward Haynes, Philip Redford and Everett Nelson.

To finance expense and upkeep of the band uniforms several movies have been presented in the school auditorium, including: "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Cricket on the Hearth," and "Doctor Jack."

L. C. Bradford, faculty director, deserves much praise for his splendid work in bringing the band to its present state of efficiency. The members of the band are as follows:

THE OPERETTA

The operetta, "The Marriage of Nanette," which was presented in the North Central auditorium the evenings of December 12th and 13th was judged as perhaps the best of its kind ever presented by the students of North Central. The attendance was especially large as nearly every ticket in the house was sold. The cast of characters is as follows:

Heloise, Countess de Marigny —— Doris Daniel
Yvonne, her sister, also known as La Gisana —— Lucile Helen Creighton
Frederic, Duc d’Antin —— William Harris
Madelon, his daughter —— Frances Hughes
Henri, Marquis de Hameur, his nephew —— Paul W. Kitts
Hilaire, his steward —— J. Richard Flyme
Mme. Zenobie, keeper of the inn —— Wilhelmina Reaume
Nanette, her daughter —— Marjorie Peterson
Edmond, Mme. Zenobie’s son, a highwayman —— George O. Paterson

Roderique —— Clarence S. Graham
Baptiste —— J. Hamlin Robertson
Jean —— Harold D. Nichely

Edmond’s friends, also highwaymen —— Norval Rader
Reporello, a Gypsy chief —— John Armstrong
Zingara, a Gypsy girl —— Bernice Bunt

Rene, a village youth in love with Nanette —— Helen Betty Brooks

Yvette, a village maid —— Helen Betty Brooks
Emile, a village youth —— Norman McGinty
Susanne, servant at the inn —— Jeanne Clusin
Marcel, servant at the inn —— Wesley Bell
Pierre Parthenay, notary, town crier, etc. —— Elmer J. Anderson
Paulino, a peddler —— Forrest Daniel
Santo, Reporello’s bear —— Edward Reats

Chorus, villagers, Gypsies, etc.

Those students taking part in the chorus were: Katherine Marie Curry, Marion Ruth Redford, Willard Sisson, Floyd Tesarlis and Lee White play horns. Those playing trombones are: Letus Bailey, Eugene Brazier, Claire Collier, Jim Jordan, Robert Lockhead, Courtland Lohr, Everett Nelson and William Steenbergen. Those playing the baritones are; John Armstrong, Howard Austin, Russell McNeil; the basses are played by Lowry Bennett, J. Albert Biggar and Rex Fairburn, Ellwood De Feyter, George Graham, Jack Nance, Arthur Ross and Robert Sater play the drums.
European Gypsy maids. William Harris, in his role of the Duc, was most satisfactory to the audience. Norval Rader, as Ken Nanette’s lover played well his romantic part as did Paul Kitto and Richard Flynn who were also lovers.

The crew of highwaymen did much to add flavor to the entertainment. The part of Santo, Reporelo’s bear, is particularly deserving of praise and his capers were most bearlike. The part was taken by A. Edward Keats.

Each character played or sang his part very well and the ensemble was considered the best ever produced in North Central. Too much credit cannot be given to the directors, C. Olin Rice, Miss Lucile Elliott, and Miss Elsa Pinkham, whose efforts did much to make the operetta a success. Also to Mr. Russell for his assistance in making sets. The dances which were coached by Miss Pinkham were most attractive.

The following girls took part: Gypsy—Stephania Sundbye, Ren Ruth Hurst, Claire Donovan, Betty Cahlan, Avon Counts; Dawx—Gertrude Olson, Louise Melde, Anna May Hayes, Lenore Kippen, Marion LeFevre, Mina Trabert, Dorothy Potter, Virginia McGuire, Kathleen Harris, Alice Nicholson, Bernice Helen Harris, Marie Niecodemas, Catherine Nichols, Marjorie Bloom, Velma Gardner.

THE ORCHESTRA

For many years the North Central orchestra has been a leading factor in the success of school entertainments. According to tradition the orchestra will play at the baccalaureate and at the commencement exercises. They also provide the music and fillers at the class play and operetta. The members spent much time and effort for the benefit of the school and they practice every Wednesday night under the directorship of C. Olin Rice, head of the music department. One-fourth credit is given each semester for this work. There are a number of members of the orchestra in the graduating class.

The first orchestra for this semester is as follows: first violins—Leah Luftkin, Eoline Johnson, Gladys Seely, Alberta McPhie, George Graham, Quentin Coffin, Frances Billerbeck, Irene Burke, Louise Markwood, Alta Geppert, Lowery Bennett and Jim Jordan. Second violins—Ruth McMaster, Josephine Miller, Helen Engdahl, Lewis Patterson, Irving Coffman, Ralph Green, Iris Winslow, Mildred Henkel, Ruth Jacobs, Hazel Luecken and Ruth Witt. Cello, Mary Feninger; viola, Viola Meyer, Hazel Perusse and Courtland Lohr; bass, Mella Rude and Mabel Brown; flute, Ronald Rice; first clarinet, Eugene Almquist; second clarinet, Samuel Knight; saxophone and oboe, Harold Anderson; first cornet, L. C. Bradford; second cornet, Myrtle Mitcham; first horn, Philip Redford; second horn, Willard Sisson; trombone, Everett Nelson; drums, Phil Daniels; melody saxophone, George Fleming; bells, Helen Whitnell; and Jane Van Nordstrand, piano.

ALUMNI ORCHESTRA

This semester a most novel organization has been formed of North Central graduates; namely, an all-star alumni orchestra. The orchestra made its first appearance at the pep convocation for the Thanksgiving game. And was presented again at a double pay convocation December 17.

The program was presented under the auspices of the band in order that some much needed uniforms and instruments might be purchased. The appearance of this orchestra was most welcome to the students and according to L. C. Bradford, director of the school band, “This is the most brilliant and versatile aggregation on the coast. Their relation to the school as grads and former members of the band is unique. Their high regard for the interests of the school and their willingness to support band activities is a standard of school spirit to which other grads may well aspire.”

The list of members is as follows: Dr. Riley Diviney, ’14; Loring Overman, ’17; John Bulmer and Robert Green, ’18; Leighton Bailey, ’22; Guy Winship, ’19; and Byron McCoy, ’24.

HEARKEN RADIO CLUB (MEN)

The static never bothers me, No cash have I to blow, For tubes or a new battery— I have no radio

“So you murdered your brother, Haynes. Thirty days.”

“Oh, judge not so hard he was only a little kid.”
The Senior Class Play "Tweedles" by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson was presented the evenings of the 10th and 17th of January in the North Central auditorium. Friday evening the leading roles were played by Mary Allison in the character of Winsora and Robert Pritchard as Julian. Saturday night Cynthia Cadwell and Don Cary Smith were the leading players.

The cast for the play is as follows:

Mrs. Rickets, a summer cottager ....Mary Burke
Mrs. Albergone, mistress of the Antiquity Shop. ..... Frances Jimson
Winsora, waitress ............................ Mary Allison
Cynthia Cadwell
Julian Castlebury, her lover .... Robert Pritchard
Don Cary Smith
Mrs. Castlebury, mother of Julian ................................................. Elinor Jackson
Mr. Castlebury, father of Julian ................................................. Mathew Stevens
Adam, Tweedle, father of Winsora ............................................. Harold Wall
Ambrosa Tweedle, brother of Winsora ..................................... William Elmsley and Ted Rohwer
Philemon, town constable .... William Becker

The play takes place in and around the Antiquity Shop and the "Tea Terrace" at the old Tweedle mansion. The village in which they live is a fashionable summer resort. The Castleburys, people of wealth and position, are spending the summer in one of the cottages with their son, Julian, who is a dreamy rather impractical appearing sort of person.

The Tweedles are aristocrats of the village and do not think much of the summer cottagers. Their family has been well known for hundreds of years and it is almost beyond belief that one of their family would associate with one of those nobodies of the summer colony, much less to marry.

Winsora Tweedle, a comely village maid with an appearance of intelligence, is the waitress at the "Terrace" and also takes care of the trade in the Antiquity Shop which belongs to her aunt. It is in the shop that young Julian makes the acquaintance of Winsora and having fallen in love does not realize what ails him, he believes the main attraction is the splendid set of Bristol glass which he purchases and goes daily to see.

As the plot continues there is considerable talk in the village and among the summer cottagers about Julian and his Bristol glass. Both families are outraged to think their child should be talked about.
and that Julian and Winsora should care for each other. In spite of parents and family complications love finds a way and Winsora and Julian go for their first walk together accepted lovers.

One of the factors that added greatly to the attractiveness of the stage and the atmosphere of the play were the rare antiques loaned by Spokane residents. One of particular interest was a Grandfather's clock.

All characters deserve much praise for their able interpretation of their parts and too much can not be said of the patience and able direction of Miss Lucile Elliott, dramatic coach.

THE ART DEPARTMENT

This semester the members of the Art department and the members of the Art club have been very busy doing their bit around the school. Their work adds greatly to the beauty of North Central. Students who are most advanced have designed and painted the scenery for the operetta. This semester the Art club, which consists mainly of active members of the Art department, has catalogued the pictures of the school and made the plates that hang below them and each week they changed the picture that is placed over the stairs outside Miss Gibson's office and arrange the notes concerning the artist. They also have charge of the show case near the cafeteria. They have added greatly to the efficiency of the Art department by purchasing a daylight reflector for class work.

Many of the attractive posters which have been shown around North Central were designed by the students of the Art department with linoleum block stencils. The design used at Thanksgiving time, drawn and cut by Arnold Markham, was a pennant in the colors red and black with the word Indians written across.

The new Indian head, symbolic of the name of North Central, Indians; and which is used by the rooters and the yell leader, was drawn by Ira Decker also a member of the Art department.

CRIPPLE CREEK

E. BENJAMIN BURIED IN LOCAL CEMETERY

Was Dandy Boy—Too Bad

Leon Hilker and Matilda Benjamin were recently married after the death of her deceased husband, Elmer Benjamin, who was buried here in the cemetery of this county Friday. "Elmer was a dandy boy," stated Parson Hollbrook as he was leaving to witness the Dempsey-Firpo fight which was held in Jersey City last month. Many people was at the cemetery for the ceremonies. Immediately after the burial the crowd swarmed to the home of the bride where the wedding was to be staged. The home was beautifully decorated with the flowers that had been used previously. The wedding broke up after a pleasant vocal selection "Who's Sorry Now" rendered by the dead boy's mother. After accompanying the couple to the train the inhabitants left for their respective homes. The Clarion Editor wishes the newlyweds many happy returns of the day and also its great sorrow to Mrs. Benjamin for the loss of Elmer.

HONORS COOLIGE

Pie and Lovely Spice Cake Included in Basket

Mrs. Cicero Tyie is heading a committee of the Cripple Creek Auxiliary which is making up a little Xmas basket to honor the Pres. of the U. S. (C. Coolige) for his good work in the capital. Mrs. Jenkins is sending a nice spice cake and Mrs. Ferdinand Furrough is donating a dandy pie which has got the letters C. C. inscribed in the upper crust this stands for Cripple Creek and Cal Coolige which speaks for itself. Sophie, Abraham Que's pet heifer has donated a large quart of whipping cream. It is believed that the Pres. will appreciate this gift the most because Sophie is a prize winner. Mr. Coolige is altogether deserving of this slight token as he has did some mighty fine work," says Elmer Auguth, local jam maker.

EMILY WITHERSPOON LEAVES FOR SEMINARY

Was Saved by Meat Hook

Miss Emily Witherspoon of Cripple Creek left last Thursday for White Horse Seminary in Horseshoe County, Wis. She will assume her duties there as a student in the history dept.

"I believe that the history course in good old White Horse is nice," stated Emily on departing. She left at 9:46, the train being 46 minutes late. George Turner, another man of this city is engineering the train to White Horse where Emily is seeking her education. Before the train pulled out Mr. Turner was heard to say that his ant who is living in Missouri and who was Pres. of the Cripple Creek Auxiliary which has done some dandy things for the local people is sick with the lumbago.

Emily was a very bright girl while attending district School no. 49 here in this city. She has also been very fortunate so far to say as she has not met with any fatal accidents as yet. Fat Shank, local butcher, recalls one incident when Emily who was trying to catch a pigeon which was on his roof slipped and fell 30 feet only to be saved from instant death when she caught her neck on a meat hook which was outside the shop. She sustained a stiff neck and a few little pains that didn't amount to much.

The Clarion wishes to express its sincerest wishes for Emily's outcome, and it is believed that the Clarion wishes will be fulfilled. The Clarion also wishes to state that the subscriptions are running far below last year's par.

"When you jumped over that fence you showed lots of agility."

"Ya I told ma to sew up that tear in my pants."

MELO-DRAMMA TO BE STAGED PRETTY SOON

Sid Snatch Has Crew Part; Was Horse Shoe Thief

Emil Sopp, local theatre magnet, is sponsoring some spicy entertainment next Friday night over at the fire station's reception hall. The production will be of the melo-drama type and one of the most gigantic of its kind in Cripple Creek. The play selected by Emil is, "When Caesar Sees Her." The crook part will be taken by Sidney Snatch, one of Cripple Creek's worst dead-beats, and also makes a good crook in civilian life, as last winter he was caught stealing a pair of horse shoes, for his mare, Nedra, out of Dud Kippert's lively barn. It has been rumored that he will be exonerated if he succeeds in the drama.

PURCHASE MAKES MRS. SMITHER GLAD

TOWN HALL INVESTS IN GRASS CUTTER—IS KEEN KUTTER

The Cripple Creek town hall has just bought a brand new lawnmower, the real reason was because the grass was getting so long that it was causing all the horses in the adjoining field to break down the fences trying to get over to a better plot of fodder. The new addition to the town hall supplies was certainly nice. The mower is equipped with a patent axe grinder which should be very handy in case the local farmers should lose his axe. Mrs. Andy Smither says that she thinks the lawnmower is a dandy thing because it will help her to keep her Ralph awake during the warm summer months. The equipment is a "Keen Kutter" which is handled by the local store.

I've got a three dollar bill. Impossible.
Tell that to my dentist it's from him.

Organizations
GIRLS’ LEAGUE

The Girls’ League of North Central was organized in March, 1918, when it was decided that an organization of this type was necessary. At this time there were about 900 girls enrolled in the school with no organization to reach them all.

The purpose of the League is to develop in each and every girl through cooperative activities, a sense of loyalty to the highest interests of the school, the community and the nation.

Miss Gibson, who has been the director since it was organized, has been the mainstay. She, together with the cooperation of the girls has made it the well-known organization it is today.

There are four departments to the League, the entertainment department, the vocational department, the personal efficiency department, and the social service department. At the beginning of every semester each girl signs up for the department she desires to work in.

The social service department is limited to juniors and seniors. The principal work of this department is philanthropic work and it also helps the social service bureau. Miss Helen McDonnell of the language department is faculty director of the department and Mary Sartor is the student director. Every Christmas this department takes charge of securing Christmas presents for all the orphans at the Spokane Children’s home in order that they may have as happy a Christmas as others enjoy.

The personal efficiency department covers all athletics and health work. The hiking club comes under this department. The club takes several hikes a semester in which the girls have an opportunity to work for an emblem as well as going out for the sport of hiking. Those who head this department are Miss Elsa Pinkham and Irene Smith.

The vocational department has charge of all the vocational work that is carried on in the League. This department took charge of the distribution of Christmas seals this year and North Central subscribed her quota. Miss Mabel Clayston of the history department and Lucia Austin are the leaders of this semester.

All girls who have any dramatic ability are encouraged to join this department as this department has charge of the entertaining of the League. They give a party every year for the girls of the school which is always a success and is appreciated by all. The heads of this department are Miss Bertha Boehme of the language department and Margaret Coughlin.

In the last year a creed has been adopted by the girls and a contest has also been held to secure a Girls’ League song. The first prize went to Ruth Bloomquist for the original music and to Gertrude Ham for the words. The second by Lulu Fyhrle, won $5 for the words.

The dress regulations committee is composed of 12 girls who are elected in their respective departments, three in each department, at the beginning of each semester. Ever since the regulations were adopted the League has given a style show once a year to encourage proper dress for high school girls.

The emblem chosen by the League in the spring of 1918 carries the motto of the League as represented by the three words at the head, “Honor, Service, Loyalty.” It is the honest effort and pride of every girl to uphold this motto to the best of her ability.
BOYS' FEDERATION

The Boys' Federation was founded originally to aid war campaigns. At the close of the war the educational and social values of the organization were so appreciated that it was thought fit to request its reorganization on a permanent peace plan. The object was to promote activities by which boys might develop personal efficiency, competent leadership, and social responsibility.

The new constitution provided for an Executive council, including officers elected by the boys, class representatives, and one representative from each boys' club. Three departments composed the working end. They were the personal service department, the community service department, and the school service department. Each department has from 10 to 15 committees working under it.

Social education and citizenship training in North Central are built directly upon the principle that to learn is to do. Good psychology demands that students not only receive impressions of good government from their history and civic classes, but give expression of their knowledge through cooperative self-government.

Council meetings are conducted with an adherence to parliamentary law which might flatter some adult assemblies. Elections are held according to civic procedure. Most significant of all, students learn through direct experience the lessons of social responsibility. By a recent check it was learned that 91 out of 100 boys who graduated last June had given time and service to the work of the school outside the class room. The boys' work at North Central aims to supplement the class room in sending into the social world of affairs socially trained men.

A great deal of attention is given to the democracy and efficiency of the organization. In many ways the organization has been planned after the civic form of government. Two years ago a new system of election was introduced. By this system to receive a nomination for an executive office, a petition must be filled with at least 50 signatures. This allows any student a fair chance to win an office. The election held is almost identical to the one held in the city. All students must previously register in order to vote. Primaries are first held and all nominees save two are eliminated from the finals. Nominees for the class offices are elected after the same manner except that only 15 signatures are required on the petitions.

The offices of the organization are president, vice president, clerk, treasurer, and financial secretary. During the present administration Robert Fritchard is president; Manley Douglas, vice president; Delbert Gildersleeve, clerk; Hawley Cole, treasurer; and Neil Lamson, financial secretary.

PEP CARNIVAL

The fifth annual Pep Carnival was held under the auspices of the Associated Student councils on November 21, between the hours of six-thirty and ten o'clock p.m.

Joe Greenough, manager of the 1923 Carnival, again served in that capacity and was assisted by Pauline Russell, assistant manager; Jack Quinn, head of construction; Donald Disotell, head of publicity; Hawley Cole, head banker; Dorcas Leslie, decoration head, and Elinor Hove, shows head.

Total gross receipts of the 1924 Pep Carnival amounted to $1275, while expenses approximated $650, leaving about $625 for distribution among the 21 school organizations taking part in the Carnival. The attendance at this year's Carnival was over 3000.

The management continued the policy inaugurated last year of making as much of the equipment as possible permanent. Twenty-five steel ticket containers were purchased, portable partitions for use in the gymnasium were constructed, additional bunting for decoration purposes was used, and other kindred additions to permanent equipment were made. The success of this and past Carnivals has assured the continuation of them, and this policy will undoubtedly materially decrease the cost of future Pep Carnivals.

Following the precedent set last year, Mildred Louiselle was elected queen of the fifth annual Pep Carnival, and her coronation was a feature of the evening.
GIRLS' LEAGUE CENTRAL COUNCIL
Miss Jessie E. Gibson, Director

President Margaret Hodgins
Vice President Eleanor Hove
Secretary Vileen Chinn
Treasurer Helen Fowler

The Girls' League central council meets every two weeks. It is the executive body of the League and is composed of the four general officers, the head of the four departments, chairman of the room representatives, chairman of the dress regulation committee, and the faculty advisors.

The council conducts elections, cares for all funds, manages the dress regulations, promotes high standards of scholarship and conducts and supervises the League honor roll. At the end of each semester the names of all girls who have fulfilled the requirements are placed on the honor roll.

This semester the council has studied parliamentary law under the direction of Miss Mabel Clayton. The Girls' League Constitution has been printed and the songs are also being published. The library clerks have been added to the social service department as a new committee. The News campaign was also managed by the council. The Lewis and Clark central council was entertained at a tea given by the members of the Leagues' central council.

One of the large undertakings of the La Tertulia each year is to give a Spanish play in convocation. This requires much effort and time on the part of the members in order to make it a success.

In the spring the club prints the La Tertulia paper. This is put out to further interest in Spanish.

Another important event in the yearly program of the club is the Spanish essay contest. All students who have taken or are taking Spanish are eligible. After the papers have been judged, the student who has the best essay is awarded a loving cup. This contest makes the Spanish department more popular and arouses a deeper and more interesting study of the language.
CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The girls shown above are not members of any one club except in the sense that Camp Fire girls regard themselves members of one sisterhood. They represent thirteen North Side groups averaging from ten to twenty members who meet under the direction of an older girl or woman, the guardian. Their work includes social and community service, nature study, camp lure, athletics, hand and home craft. The gowns shown in the picture are individual records symbolical of the girl's standing in her group and the beads and ornaments represent her progress in the seven crafts emphasized in Camp Fire work.

...tion they set out to conquer all their studies and to do it well. The evil spirits of physics and chemistry caused many nights of dread. The arrows of Newton, Archimedes, and countless others constantly menaced the Braves. However, the leading members of the tribe gave the weaker ones a helping hand, and thus they passed on to the Senior year with but a minor decrease in numbers.

Seniors at last. For hours, for days, for weeks the members of the class of January '25 labored late into the dusk and into the early hours of the morning, striving—striving to reach the grade—perfection. Temptations, no matter how great, could not persuade the tribe to leave their endeavors for even one short moment. Recognizing the importance of cooperation, service and loyalty, the redskins called a council, chose their leaders and decided upon a tribal emblem. It was during this year that one of the members of the band received a fitting prize for writing the best vocational play. Another of the tribe won honor by placing first in the National Oratorical contest.

As the year wore on the tribe became Senior A's. Again they met in conference to choose leaders, and to carry on the ideals and traditions of the band. At this point the Braves nearly met with disaster for it was necessary to select a photographer, and to choose gowns for graduation. The dissension was put down and they once more became a united band. Now came the big pow wows that would mark the last days of January '25 in the camp of the North Central Indians. First came the Senior Class Play. Close upon its heels followed baccalaureate. Then in rapid succession came Kid day, Class day, and—commencement. Thus did the tribe of January 1925 end their career in the North Central enclosure, but never will they forget their tribe and in spite of everything they will always be a loyal and devoted band.

TAMARACK ENTIRELY SCHOOL PRODUCT

One of the factors which has helped greatly to make the January '25 Tamarack a success is the attractive cover design which was drawn by Eugene Almquist, who is cartoonist for the News and a student of the Art department. The design is a red feather used on the cover and inserts.

The layouts for the seniors were drawn by Helen Nelson also a student of the Art department. She has been most active in the Art department since her entrance into North Central.

All the printing for the Tamarack has been done in the North Central print shop by the advanced printing class under the directorship of E. E. Green, printing teacher. This is the first year that club and athletic pictures have been taken by the school. Carl F. Isaeason, News photographer took all the pictures.

WILD OATS (CEREAL)

A Drama in One Part

"T was a rainy night in China-town one of those nights that make a shiver chill your spine. But a few figures were seen sulking here and there through the dimly lighted ancient criminal district. The never ending slashing rain seemingly spelled an ominous forboding and the ruthless wind sang a deathlike chant as it whistled through the dark narrow alleys. Little Ming Toy was scurrying to her old father's bedside where he lay dying. She was a coy little oriental of perhaps sixteen, and a nicer little girl could not be found. Just as she passed the next alley she was clutched from behind and a villainous hand with long jagged finger nails reached her terrified gaze, "no," she gasped, and a struggle ensued but she did not yield, a second scream that was blood curdling was heard an again the defiant answer which seemed to quiver, stabbed the downpour, "no!" and on went the night. Her morale was broken, "I'll tell, oh please, I'll tell! You can get chop suey right across the street."

This month's prize goes to the guy that is so dumb that he is coaxing his mother to let his little sister go to Gonzaga because he likes Stockton so well.

Where all us goofies go
To write a weakly (?) paper
And cut a merry caper.
We take a daily snooze
When we should be writin' news
And when we get a "D"
The reason's hard to see.
Oh, won't you sympathize
And try to realize
We do it all for you?

The busiest place
On this earth's face
Is the office of the News,
On the day we know as Tues
The typewriters click
And none gives a kick
For anything but his assignment
We lose manners and refinement
In the hurry, the scurry,
The hum drum and worry
For we leave it all
Till the last—but recall
We do it all for you.

The litteredest place
On this earth's face
Is a nook on the lowest floor
To the south— first door.
Waste paper piles high
(And this is no lie)
Till we play hide-and-seek
Five times every week.

To be found 'midst the paper
But they all represent
Much time hard spent
We do it all for you.

He: I love you in the spring time, and I love you in the fall. I want you, Marqueta, I need you, Marqueta, I do.
She: (ignoringly) Sleep, sleep, sleep—how I love to sleep at the close of day.
He: I love you. I love you. It's all that I can say.
She: (still ignoringly) Oh, it ain't gonna rain no mo', no mo'.
He: My wonderful one, how my arms ache to hold you—
She: (same) Way down upon the Swannee river—
He: Sweet little you, I'm just wild about you.
She: (same) Carry me back to old Virginny.
He: Hard hearted Hannah! Remember the times we had, dear, remember our love so true.
She: Don't cry, Frenchie, don't cry.
He: Who's heart are you breaking, now?
She: It had to be you.
He: The girl I love belongs to somebody else. What'll I do?
She: Start down the trail to home, sweet home.
Now he's singing When lights are low and Strolling again Memory Lane.

UNDER the coaching of Clarence A. Zimmerman, new North Central grid mentor, the North Side Indians went through the most successful season in North Central history. Not only did the team go through the season undefeated but it also made history for the school when it completed the season without being scored upon. The Indians rolled up a total of 56 points to their opponents' zero. The team played five games all of which were against crack teams.

At the beginning of the season little was known of how the team would turn out. The material was admittedly good but the same material had suffered a rather rough voyage through the previous season and no one was willing to predict what kind of a team would develop. To add to the worries of their Red and Black backers a new coach was taking the helm and his task was far from easy for he had to pick an almost new backfield and recast the line. There were no experienced halfbacks and the new coach was forced to develop a pair to fill the shoes of the former stars McGrath and Jones. The spirit of the squad was good however, and by hard work and long practice the Indians had a formidable machine to meet what proved to be their toughest opponents in the first game of the season when they journeyed to Portland to take on Washington high, champions of that city. The team showed wonderful defensive strength and flashes of a powerful offense which, due to lack of practical experience in games was as yet inconsistent. However, the potential strength was there. The team fought hard and by showing superior defensive work coupled with brilliant flashes of power was able to pull the game out of the fire by a 3-0 score. After the Portland game a three weeks' layoff took the edge off the squad and only a 3 to 0 victory was chalked up against the fighting Gonzaga Bullpups. The comments on the result of this game proved a thorn in the flesh of the team and when the Indians met the crack Wa-Hi gridders they were fighting mad and registered a 12-0 win. The week following saw a 7-0 victory over Yakima, which showed that the offense was still inconsistent in the pinches. However, they succeeded in rolling up a total yardage of over 500 to 44 for the visitors. After this game came the polishing off process for the annual Lewis and Clark game. The offense was greatly developed and when the team took the field for the tussle it presented one of the most powerful teams both on the offense and defense that ever had donned the moleskins for North Central. Doped to be a very close game it developed into a contest which showed North Central superior in every department to their ancient rivals who up to this time had won every game. The punch through the line was powerful, while the ability to run ends and through broken fields was remarkable for a set of backs who at the beginning of the season were doped to be very mediocre. The game turned out to be a 31-0 victory for North Central, which is the worst drubbing Lewis and Clark has received since 1912, when another Red and Black team beat them 62-6.

The weather for the game was ideal, and 12,000 enthusiastic fans watched the teams battle. Besides being a football victory, it was also a victory for the North Central student body, who won various cups and pennants for their yelling ability. All of which made the day a perfect end for a perfect season.

Pritchard, Donovan, Blod, assistant manager, Birckett, Captain Hogle.

Lower row: Bostwick, Douglass, Sommerville, Hughes, Axtell, Haynes, Rohwer, Graham, Captain-elect Gildersleeve, Minnick.
THE PORTLAND GAME

Unlike most years the North Central Indians started the season with an intersectional grid battle when they met Washington high school of Portland, Ore., on October 4.
The Washingtonians had four times won the interscholastic championship of Portland and were strongly favored to win from the fighting red skins of Spokane who were going into their first battle of the season. The teams met on the rain soaked Multnomah stadium field and before 4000 eager football fans waged one of the prettiest grid battles ever seen in the Rose City. For three quarters the teams battled back and forth with neither eleven able to push over a score. It was not until the fourth quarter that the Indians were able to advance the ball within striking distance of the Maroon and Gold goal. After a powerful line attack the ball was placed on the Washington 15-yard line and being held for two downs Clare
Pritchard, kicking ace of the Indians, dropped back and booted a beautiful place kick high through the bars for a 3-0 vic-ory for the Red and Black Warriors.
Clean sportsmanship characterized both teams. The Indians were well received and entertained royally during their brief stay. All courtesy was shown the victors and it was audaciously conceded that the best team had won.

THE GONZAGA DUAL

After a three weeks’ layoff following the Portland game the Indians took the field to do battle with the Gonzaga Bullpups. The game proved to be one of the hardest of the season as the young Bulldogs put up a strong defence which after the first quarter the Warriors were unable to puncture consistently.
After an exchange of punts following the first kick-off the Red and Black squad made a march of 50 yards to the enemies
one-yard line where a fumble lost the ball and a chance to score. Had this touchdown been made the aspect of the entire game would probably have been changed as the lost chance seemed to take the pep out of the North Central team. The team continued to play a brilliant game on defense, however, and only once was the goal in danger. At this point, however, the Blue and White failed to make yardage and attempted a place kick which was smothered under a cloud of Red and Black ejerseys. Play was about even until the last quarter when the Indians again made determined march to the Bullpup 15-yard line where Clare Pritchard again was called upon to boot the pigskin between the bars. As usual Clare delivered and another 3-0 victory was won for North Central.

WA-HI BATTLE

The next game, which fell on November
1, saw the North Siders in action against the Walla Walla gridders at Walla Walla. Owing to the score of the Gonzaga game the Blue and White was favored to win over the Red and Black battlers but the Indians were keyed up to such a fighting pitch that it was impossible for the Wa-Hi team to do much effective playing.
They were on the defensive most if the time and it was only the brilliant punting of Holmgren, star end, that kept the score down to a 12-0 win for North Central.
The first touchdown came as the result of a fumbled pass by a Wa-Hi back behind his own goal line which was recovered by Hogle. The next touchdown came after a smashing line attack had carried the ball from the middle of the field to the one-yard line from where Gildersleeve pushed it over for the count. Another spectacular play of the game came when Rohwer broke through the line and dashed 75 yards for a touchdown only to be called back because the officials ruled that the quarter was over before the ball was in motion. The entire team played high class football showing a strong defense and a powerful driving offense.

INDIANS MEET YAKIMA

In their second appearance on the home field the Indians humbled the Yakima team to the tune of 7-0. The apple belt squad presented a crack eleven and were strongly in hopes of trouncing the Indians
so they could again lay claim to the state title which they did last year. Such hopes however, soon went glimmering when the powerful North Central aggregation began to roll up yardage on the Orange and Black line. The score in no way indicates the gist of the battle for when the smoke of the fray cleared the Warriors had a total yardage of 298 to 44 for the opponents. The score of the game came after a sustained line attack by the Indians which finally sent Gildersleeve over for the touchdown and Rohwer added another point when he kicked goal. Yakima threatened to score only twice when in the first quarter two place kicks were tried both of which failed by a wide margin. From then on the Yakima team was forced to rely on a punting game which succeeded in keeping their goal line out of danger most of the time.

The husky North Central linesmen showed to advantage in the game many times going through and snaring opposing backs for a loss. A wet slippery field prevented an open style of play but the Indian backfield was always good for a few yards through the line.

THE LEWIS AND CLARK GAME

In the most glorious game North Central has had for many years the powerful Indian team tore a 31-0 victory from the skin of the Lewis and Clark Tiger. The North Side aggregation completely out-classed and outplayed their local opponents who according to the dopesters should have won by a 7-0 score on a dry field. The best part of it was that the field was fast and dry yet the Indians flashed a quartet of the fastest backs and a line of the most powerful high school gridders ever seen on a local field. The North Central team was a collection of stars playing perfect teamwork with but two purposes in mind; namely to win for their school and their coach.

Soon after the first whistle Manley Douglas broke away for the first sensational play when he flew around end for a 30 yard run. This paved the way for the first touchdown which Delbert Gildersleeve bucked across. Soon after the next kickoff Douglas tore around end for 35 yards more which again enabled the powerful Gildersleeve to buck the ball over. Lewis and Clark then took a brace and held until the half ended with the score standing 12-0 against them. The Tigers came back strong but their rush was soon stopped and the North Central offensive again held sway. On an end run with Rohwer and Douglas carrying the ball the pigskin was advanced to the middle of the field where Stevens, fleet Red and Black quarter, broke through the line and after dodging two opponents and evading Luck, stellar Lewis and Clark safety man, ran 55 yards for the third touchdown. Another 40 yard march put the ball on the three-yard line where R. Pritchard, hard hitting fullback who had replaced Gildersleeve, bucked it across and C. Pritchard who went in for Douglas, scored the extra point with a splendid kick.

In the fourth quarter another sensational play brought the crowd of 12,000 wild roosters to their feet when Rohwer slashed off tackle, whirled by the secondary defense, side stepped the last Orange and Black outpost and dashed 80 yards for the last touchdown of the game.

The victory was flawless in every respect. The team worked like a smooth running machine. The linesmen opened wide holes and ran perfect interference, the passes from center were all faultless, the generalship of the quarterback was superb and the advancement of the ball by the powerful backs was spectacular. All this being evidence of the splendid coaching that the Indians received from their mentor Clarence A. Zimmerman.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

This year saw one of the best freshman teams ever developed under Red and Black colors. The young pigskin pushers going through the season undefeated and no opponents crossed their goal line. Much promising material was uncovered and prospects look bright for future years when the yearlings are working on the first team.

Much credit for the victorious frosh is due to Lloyd Williams who worked long and faithfully to teach the young Warriors their tactics. Many times the coach scrimmaged with the freshman and taught them how to go through their paces. After the frosh season was over some of the star performers stayed out and were able to make places on the second team.

Although the scores of all their games were small the games were all battles as the young Indians took on all available opponents. Among the teams played were the Gonzaga J. Y. A., McKinley junior high and the Chattaroy high school team.
THE TRIBE

Captain Edgie Hogle played his last and best year as captain and leader of the championship squad. Edgie was a demon on defense and capable of snaring long forward passes and was placed on the all-city team for the third consecutive year.

Captain-elect Gildersleeve, playing his third year at fullback won the respect of all the critics and showed rare line plunging ability coupled with great speed. "Oscar" was selected by his teammates to lead the 1925 eleven.

Wayne Summerville, at right end, proved to be a tower of strength and a capable running mate for Captain Hogle. He won his letter for the first time and will probably be back next year.

Lloyd Birkett, playing his first year at end, made a good showing and was always able to step in one of the regular's places without weakening the team.

Bostwick, the giant tackle, proved to be one of the most powerful linemen in the city always playing a strong offensive game besides being a stone wall on defense. Landed on the all-city team for the second time.

Ed Lowery, playing his last year on the Red and Black team proved to be a power in the line both on defensive and offensive. His ability to smear trick plays was uncanny. Another all-city selection.

Webster McCarty, a capable understudy for the regular tackles, should be a powerful man in the line next year.

Loren Haynes, a light fast lineman whose charging ability was second to none and having as his specialty the knack of running good interference.

Don Axtell, one of the most consistent linemen ever developed at North Central, whose graduation will leave a big hole to be filled next season, placed at right guard on the all-city eleven.

Bill Becker, of the scrubs, fought his way into enough first team games to win the coveted letter. Although handicapped by lack of weight he had lots of fight.

Jack Graham, holding down the pivot position for the second year, proved a valuable man to the team. His passing and all around play was of a high caliber.

Ted Rohwer, shifted from quarterback to halfback, developed into a consistent ground gainer and placed on the mythical all-city eleven at left half.

Manley Douglas, one of the speediest halfbacks to ever don the moleskins for a Red and Black eleven, used his speed to a good advantage in the Lewis and Clark game.

C. Pritchard, a hard hitting halfback whose educated toe won two battles for the team this season.

R. Pritchard, handicapped by an injury early in the season was unable to do battle until the Yakima game. He hit the line hard and was used at fullback and half.

Matthew Stevens, one of the most consistent quarterbacks that ever barked the signals. Used good generalship at all times and ran his team like a veteran. His ability to pivot and stiffarm opposing ends made many gains for the Red and Black.

Hugh Cheesman, as manager of the team, was as capable a man as ever handled the business end of the game. His work was partly responsible for the wonderful support of the student body.

Coach C. A. Zimmerman, in his first season as coach of the North Central football squad, established history for the school by developing a team that has never had its goal line crossed. He won the whole-hearted respect of all the boys and there wasn't a member of the squad who wouldn't give all he had for his coach.
The girls' tennis team of North Central again proved its ability when it took the annual tennis tournament from Lewis and Clark for the second consecutive year, early this fall. The series of this fall was played after the manner of a round robin tournament. Each girl had to be defeated three times before she was eliminated from the contest. Three North Central girls were successful in reaching the individual finals, Rhoda Mahoney, Mable Skone and June McDonald, while only one Lewis and Clark girl remained. In the final tournament for the city championship, Glenna Jacobs, Lewis and Clark representative, was eliminated in the semifinals, also Mable Skone one of North Central's racketeers; leaving two members of the Red and Black squad to fight for the championship title. In the final clash June McDonald emerged victorious thus winning the title of girls' Spokane City champion.

The North Central girls took the lead at the beginning of the tournament and held it all through the season. As each match won counted one point for the school represented North Central was successful in securing 21 points to their opponents 15 or 21 of the 36 matches played.

The prospect for the coming season is considered very good by the coach, Miss Elsa M. Pinkham, with more than half the team back along with Captain-elect June McDonald. A good deal of credit should be given the coach for the successful season according to the girls who trained under her supervision.
THE NOVICE RACE

In a closely contested race John White nosed out Hill Johnson for first place in the annual cross country race. The winner ran a pretty race setting the pace most of the way. A large field of starters faced the tape for the annual non-letterman classic.

This was the first race of the season and gave Coach Taylor a chance to look over the largest part of his squad in action. As only students who have never won letters in cross country are allowed to participate there is always keen competition. The winner finished strong and made fast time for the course. The boy who wins the novice is presented with a beautiful gold medal. Much material was uncovered in the race, much of which was of the freshman class who in future years should go a long way in putting the long distance squad in the win column. The first five who finished were John White, Hill Johnson, Kenneth Ryan, Orville Dunham, and Ben Hayes.

THE ANNUAL CROSS COUNTRY

The Indian Marathon team went down to defeat at the hands of the Tiger squad in its annual race when three of the rival long distance men finished ahead of the first North Central man. Captain Hansen was the first runner to cross the tape for the Red and Black but finished fourth in the race. Spectators and runners alike shivered in the cold wind which swept across the course making it impossible to establish any records for the distance. The rival team was made up of veteran runners who because of their experience were able to conquer the green team most of which were running their first race. However, after the first three men crossed the tape competition was close and exciting. Coach J. Wesley Taylor expressed himself as being more than satisfied by the showing made by the team as much new and valuable material was uncovered. The first ten who crossed the line were; Don Burris, L. C., Wagner, L. C., Myrene, L. C., Hansen, N. C., White, N. C., McDonell, L. C., McDonell, L. C., Dunham, N. C., Birkett, N. C., Ryan, N. C.

GIRLS' INTERCLASS BASKETBALL

The junior class basketball team was successful in capturing the interclass championship for 1924 over its fellow competitors, the senior, sophomore, and freshman teams. The nine games of the tournament were played between November 13 and 24, and of that group the juniors took the lead with four games against three for the seniors and two for the frosh. The sophomores were unable to win a single game.

The lineups for the four teams were as follows: juniors—forwards, Mable Malone and Jean Ertel; jumping center, Shirley Shand; side center, Bernice Spores; guards, Helen Hazen and Helen Shjandemaar.

Seniors; forwards, Hollis Carter and Olga Benson; jumping center, Mable Skone; side center, Jane Johnston; guards, Audrey Morrison and Marlea Avey.

Sophomores; forwards, Rhoda Mahoney and Jo Harrower; jumping center, Virginia Thompson; side center, Martha

SECOND TEAM FOOTBALL

The fighting second string confined most of its efforts this season to whipping the first team into condition and only one outside game was played by the scrub team. The game was played against the Endicott team at Endicott, Wash. The teams were evenly matched although the sagebrushers out weighed the second stringers. After battling for three quarters on almost even terms the Endicott eleven advanced far enough to boot a field goal between the bars and win a 3-0 vic-

Captain Becker, of the scrubs, was the outstanding linesman in the game. His lack of weight was made up for by his fighting spirit and his ability to get through the opposing line and bring down speedy backs before they got started.

The second team certainly deserves all of the credit that is given them this season for aside from this game they contented themselves with turning out faithfully every night to receive the bumps and knocks they have to take to get the first team into tip-top shape. The lineup was as follows: ends, Birkett and Macri; tackles, Minnicks and Soike; guards, Becker (C.) and Armstrong; center, MacDonald; halfbacks, Hughes, Dollan and Haynes; fullbacks, Gilbertson and Ranger; quarterbacks, Haynes and Fait.

"A NORTH SIDE BANK"
The first basketball call was issued by Coach Taylor on the first of December when about ninety boys answered the Chief's cry. Among the candidates were six lettermen who had won the Inland Empire tournament and placed in the national meet at Chicago in the previous season. The lettermen to report were Fred Mitchell, Mel Sohns, Lloyd Birkett, Jack Graham, Ted Rohwer, and Don Axtell. With these veterans in suits the squad rounded into shape rapidly and was soon showing mid season form with Sohns and Mitchell wrinkling the net with regularity while "Buck" was showing his old time speed at the pivot position. Graham and Rohwer were elected to take care of the defense which they did in a high class manner. The reserve strength of the squad is also very strong with Stevens and the Hanson brothers ready to take a forward position and Axtell and Lowery ready to step into the guard jobs. Of this number, three will be lost by mid-year graduation.
when Rohwer, Lowery and Stevens receive their sheepskins.

The Indians took the warpath for the first time when they scalped the Millwood quintet to the tune 48-4. Speed and ability to hit the basket coupled with a tight defense featured the game. The next encounter saw the Indians romp home with the long end of a 23-11 score against the Gonzaga Bullpups. The tribe was going like a house on fire and in the succeeding two weeks met and defeated by decisive scores the Hillyard, Coeur d' Alene, and Colville quintets. At this time the Indians were ambushed by Davenport who, on their own floor, took the team by storm and gained the long end of the score. A return game was immediately scheduled as the squad was anxious to tangle with them again.

The Christmas holidays brought no rest for the basketeers as they were slated for a barnstorming trip through Montana where they met and conquered some of the best teams of the state including Butte high, champions of the state and Montana representatives at the 1924 National meet. The first clash of the trip came at Thompson Falls where the Red and Black easily outpointed the power city squad to the tune of 48-4. Many critics there ventured the opinion that the victors showed the greatest teamwork ever displayed on their floor. The next victory came at Missoula where the Washingtonians again came out on top with a 37-2 score. This game was featured by the close guarding of Graham and Rohwer who held the opposing forwards to a lone field goal while Sohns, Mitchell and Birkett were hitting the ring for the counters. At Butte the state champions were snowed under by a 31-7 score in a game featured by wonderful teamwork on the part of the Red and Black. The next game was played against one of North Central’s former coaches when E. R. Godfrey trotted his squad onto the maple floor to oppose the North Siders at Great Falls. Although the Great Falls boys showed much fight they were outclassed by the Red and Black team and went to defeat by a 48-8 score. The last game of the invasion saw the Indians in action against the Whitefish aggregation who, in a fast rough game met the fate of the other Montana teams when they came out on the small end of a 39-6 score. The Indians returned home Sunday and Monday afternoon saw them whipping into shape for the first Lewis and Clark battle. The team was not over-confident and went into the fray determined to avenge the defeats of the previous season. A capacity crowd turned out and witnessed one of the most furious and hard fought battles that has ever taken place in the North Side gym. The lead although small was in the hands of the Indians most of the time although the count was knotted four times during the contest, and when the gun ended the fourth quarter the score stood 13-13. In the five minute session that followed the count was again tied at 16 all until Mel Sohns tossed a counter from the middle of the floor for the first Red and Black victory over her South Side rivals in the annual basketball series.

Once upon a midnight dreary,
As he sat and called her deary
On a sofa made for one, but holding more
Suddenly there came a tapping
As of someone gently rapping
Rapping at the parlor door.
"'Tis my father, dear," she murmured
"Only he and no one more."
What cared he for her relations
He was full of exclamations
Such as "Dearie does oo love oos dearie
more?"
But her father tired of waiting
Waiting growing aggravating,
Opened wide the parlor door.
Oh how well that he remembered
That cold night in bleak December
As he flew out twenty paces from the door.
And for life will he be branded
Where her father's foot had landed
Quoth the raven "Never More."

Cop: "What do you mean by driving 40 miles an hour?
Marjorie: Why officer I have only been driving 15 minutes.

BOUND between the covers of this annual, is the story of many happy recollections. Here are the memories of bygone days of happiness—adventure—achievement.

It has been our privilege, one which we are decidedly proud of, to have assisted in making the appearance of the book entirely worthy of the most glorious traditions of Alma Mater.

Jack to John: (who are seated in the front row at musical comedy) "Your eyes remind me of the birds."
John to Jack: "How come?"
Jack to John: "They are like the birds because they flit from limb to limb."

They sat together,
Worked together,
All semester long,
Played together
Strolled together,
Happy as a song

Then:
They crowded together,
Flunked together,
And wondered what was wrong.

Walter: "Jean, you shouldn't drive so fast."
Jean: "Why not?"
Walter: "Well, this motor policeman, who has been following us, might not like it."

"Pray let me kiss your hand," said he
With looks of burning love.
"I can remove my veil," said she,
"Much easier than my glove."

Fred: (Escorting his sweetheart to senior banquet) "And may I sit on your right hand?"
She: "Nope. I've gotta use it, you'd better get a chair."

The editor's whimper: If these jokes are rotten try writing them yourself.
